could be for kids who don't want to eat veggies

How to purchase

- Rakuten
- Amazon JP
- Fine Japan Retail Site
- Canada → T&T
- Japanese Grocery

UX

- Good for on the go & optimal nutrition
- Easy to open at top, pullable tab
- Feels premium & fancy bcs individually packaged
- "heavy duty" plastic, thick, Jelly is in an aesthetically pleasing shape
- good smell, good taste
- a little difficult to open Jelly,
  ↳ maybe a small snip needed

Brand story

- Busy and on the go, a quick way to meet daily macros & nutrition goals
- Don't like textures or early veggies, can still get the nutrients
- fun & tasty way to eat veggies

Brand story pt. 2

- Convenient
- Good for people lazy to cook

Problems

- Able to buy in canada but packaging not friendly for consumers in Canada who don't understand the language
  ∴ can't read packaging
  ∴ don't understand product & purpose
- Wasn't expecting to be jelly inside
- A lot of text

Principles of Design.

1. Scale Hierarchy & balance
   - clear hierarchy, but not a clear line of where to look after the name of the product
   - Scale of text is fairly easy to read
   - Balance → a lot of elements to look at, does not feel harmonious

2. Surprise & Story
   - National University, Research Facilities
   - Goal is to supply vegetables (veggie supplements) for people who feel like they are not eating enough vegetables

3. Mystery vs. Clarity

- Mystery for consumers in English only settings
- Lots of text, hard to find key selling points & what's important

4. Positive & Negative Space

- Very little negative space & feels cluttered

5. Pattern / Movement / Lines

- No clear lines to guide eye movement

6. Colour

- Green and white
  - ↳ Front / Box colour is different
  - ↳ Transition not smooth
  - ↳ Gradients
- Text in yellow, and green
  - ↳ Inconsistent colouring
  - ↳ use colours to highlight words

7. Contrast, Variety unity

- ~~High~~ to medium contrast
- Text colours in-consistent

8.

9. Type & Image

- Fruits / veg.
- water droplets
  ↳ "refreshy"?
- Factory / Research Facilities
- Type → Rounded corner
  丸ゴシック体 gothic
- Logo very small
  → "source of vitamins and calcium, fibre"

10. Metaphor / Symbol

ゼリー de サプリ

おいしい野菜

→ "Supplement as a jelly"

→ "Delicious vegetables"

→ Leaves

↳ "Naive" maybe "Natural"
